BOLD HORSE THIEVES.

Dr. Miller's Rig Stolen From the Hotel at Ada.

Yesterday seems to have been a bad day for doctors. Besides the runaway of Dr. Owen, Dr. R. E. Miller, of 36 West Bridge street, had a little bad luck that is giving him considerable uneasiness.

The doctor, it seems, drove to Ada yesterday, and last evening at supper the hotel. After supper he ordered his horse drove up in front of the sitting room and stepped aside to speak to Mrs. Smith, the landlady. When he came to his horse and buggy was missing. A search was made but the rig could not be found. Two boys coming from Cass county were called aside to speak to Mrs. Smith by two men who were driving at a furious rate. The description given by the boys tallied with the horse lost by the doctor. The doctor thought last night some one had played a trick on him yet feared the horse was stolen. Upon arriving in the city with a rig borrowed at Ada he made a thorough search but failed to find the horse. Sheriff Bishop was notified late last night and should be successful in finding the horse and the guilty parties the ride they took will no doubt be a dear one. The horse was a valuable one and prized very highly by the doctor and his family.

DOING WELL.

A Few Lines About the Circulation of the "Morning Press."

Number 14 of the Morning Press is issued this morning and the managers are well pleased with the result of the past two weeks. As will be seen by the statement printed on the second page subscriptions have been taken at an average rate of nearly 100 per day, and the street sales have been very encouraging.

It is hardly probable that this rate of increase can be maintained for a month, but it is hoped that by the end of the first month the paper will have a paid circulation of at least 3,000 copies. The subscriptions have been obtained upon the merits of the paper, without any attempt to "sell" it, without offering dictionaries, door plates or bicycles as premiums.

A Crush at the Lake.

There was a huge crowd at the lake yesterday to witness the balloon ascension. The ascension was made in the afternoon, and when it was over there was a tremendous rush for the dummy. In the crush at the gate of the pen several women and children were badly hurt, and considerable indignation was expressed at the inadequate provisions for handling a crowd. Two or three tickets were instead of one, would obtain what is not only an unpleasant, but in the case of slender people a dangerous feature of a visit to this pretty resort.

Thumped by Toughs.

Robert Suid, who resides on Comstock street, told a painful story at police headquarters last night. It seems Mr. Suid and his best girl, Miss Julia De Groot, an ex-ni-mate of the Emerson house, went to Reed's Lake yesterday to see the attractions. On their way to the city a gang of toughs pitched on to Mr. Suid and gave him a terrible slugging. Suid was unable to tell their names, but gave a good description to the officers. If from the description the guilty parties can be found, it seems that a complaint for deadly assault.

Where is Mr. Cox?

Edward Cox of the plumbing firm of Cox Bros., is mysteriously missing. He left his home two weeks ago on a business trip to Mackinac, and his family have not heard from him since. His accounts and financial matters here are all straight, and he had recently no reason for remaining away more than a few days at the most.

Mr. Shepard's Funeral.

The remains of the late Charles N. Shepard, whose death was announced in yesterday's issue, will arrive on the early train from Chicago this morning. The funeral will occur at 10:30 a. m. from the residence of Dr. Shepard.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

It grows more evident every day that the Strauss orchestra concerts to be given at Hartman's hall, Tuesday afternoon and evening, will be greeted by a simply immense audience. The desire to hear this organization is one that prevails all classes, and that must result in outpourings which will pack the hall to its very part. Strauss melodies have so touched the hearts and aroused the sympathies of the American people that an opportunity to see the composer so much charming music and to hear the great orchestra which is the fountain head of the torrent of Strauss music, is well nigh universal. Preparations for the great events are going on satisfactorily and all are confident that the most pleasurable enjoyment for all who gather within the comfortable auditorium. A few words regarding the man who heads this noted orchestra will not be amiss.

Edward Strauss is the youngest son of Johann Strauss the elder, the founder of the Strauss family. He is the youngest of his father's wishes Edward should have entered the diplomatic career, but he did not feel any disposition for that calling. He desired to devote himself alike his brothers, exclusively to the musical avocation. He quit his studies and first assumed the leadership of the orchestra, alternating with his brother Joseph until 1870, when the latter died. In 1871 Edward Strauss was appointed imperial and Royal Court Ball Music director of Austria by his majesty Emperor Francis Joseph, and until the present day his orchestra plays the dances at the all Court balls.

The concert at Hartman's hall Tuesday will offer the chance of a lifetime to Grand Rapids music lovers, and it is unreasonable to suppose that anyone with any instinct for the divine art will willingly miss being present at at least one of these concerts. Strauss and his trusty followers will soon sail away across the sea to their Vienna home, and they will not have the chance for people of this country to hear them then will be to travel to Europe.

The box office at Hartman's hall will be open until 10 o'clock this evening and seats for Strauss can then be procured. It is a very convenient for men who are unable to leave their business to reserve seats during the day.

The new productions in New York last week were Wilson Barrett's "The Melodrama," "Good Old Times," Evans & Hoy's revised "Parlor Match," and "The Clemenceau Case." The first proved a success at the Fourteenth street theater, with Atkins Lawrence, John Gledhill and Eleanor Carey in the cast. Evans & Hoy were warmly welcomed at the new Park theater, and Clara Throp and the Levy sisters made a fine support for the popular comedienne "The Clemenceau Case" at the Standard can scarcely be said to be a success, especially as Pearl Etylidge was untried for the part in which she was cast, and Wilson Loehage had a hard time of it. "The Clemenceau Case" was elegantly staged and with a few changes in the cast may yet be made a success. "The Clemenceau Case" was given a splendid reception. Sol Smith, who played the part of the "Poor Relation," with a bill, it is hardly likely that he will continue the former play, as the cast requires seventeen people, making an expensive company.

The cast of "A Fair Rebel," which will be presented at the Park Friday and Saturday, includes Miss Fanny Gillette, an actress who has done creditable work in the big stock companies in New York, and has been received with favor all the great cities in the country. A military piece is always interesting, but "A Fair Rebel" is said to be one of the better class of attractions. The play is strong in dramatic situations. "A Fair Rebel" is a great feature, and its natural characters are a relief from the unreal people that we see in many of the modern dramas.

"The Limited Mail," as its name indicates, has to do with railroad incidents and those who witness the performance at Redmonds', this evening, will see an express train, a telegraph office and a number of other realistic scenes on the stage, that will make the entertainment as interesting one. Miss Florence Binsley is the leading lady and it is said that she is supported by a first-class company. The management merits the highest commendation.

Mal Goodwin has returned from England and will begin his American tour, October 6. He will play "A Gai Mine" and "The Nominee" this season, and the reputation he made abroad will stand him well in his own country. Mr. Goodwin is one of the leading comedians in America, at the present time.

An excellent vaudeville performance is announced for Smith's opera house, this week. Many of the specialties have been seen and they are known to be meritorious. Mabel Sterling is one of the leading vocalists on the vaudeville stage.

John Kelly in Hard Luck. Last night a man giving the name of John Kelly appeared at police headquarters and asked for lodgings. He was sick, and hungry, and indeed his appearance was anything but attractive. He explained that he had been arrested and put into his case sent him to the jail and the county superintendent of the poor will look after him this morning.

Lay It to Providence.

Detroit Free Press: The crew break on the Reading road appears to one who reads the account to have been brought about through gross carelessness, but it isn't all likely that such will be the verdict. The press says that the cause of a study of the "Divine Providence" trick that they can work it 99 times out of a hundred.

A Midnight Runaway.

A horse owned by Dr. Owen of 38 Paris avenue, ran away late last night. The animal was being driven by a hired man and became frightened at a pile of paper. The buggy was badly broken and the horse received a slight cut on one of his legs.
