WEST FULTON STREET

The Extension Discussed by the City Fathers

A Resolute Contractor—Finnigan Falls of Confirmation

Alderman Turner dragged himself from a sick room to the council chamber last night and won a partial victory in the West Fulton street extension fight.

The battle was opened in the midst of the rainy season by a couple of reports from the committee on streets, one recommending that a change be made in the grade line, and one urging that the street be opened as early in the new year as practicable.

Alderman Turner at once assumed the aggressive. The adoption of the reports, he said, would destroy the beauty of Park park and saddle the city with a greater bill of expense than the noted and lauded Chicago plan.

It would necessitate a cut of six feet along the north line of the park, and a half of thirty or forty feet through the McManara property on the east. And after the street was made no more than a foot wide.

There are only three horse ways west of the park, and fifty people will not drive to town that way.

His plan would be to open a street along the foot of the park, and extend it to the ravine. There is already a roadway through the ravine in the park, and the two would meet on the West side, much as the streets do around Crescent park.

Alderman Doyle and Mills strongly defended the reports and urged their adoption. Mr. Mills insisted that the road through the ravine was impracticable.

The business men on Fulton street have just expended $14,000 on improvements, and they are not prepared to extend so that they can obtain the country trade.

One of the bill's opponents is a member of the joint committee, recommending that no change be made in the grade was adopted.

LITTLE BRONZE LADY

And a Son Lost for Thirty Years—Sir Edwin's Curious Story

Regarding Sir Edwin Arnold, who is booked for the opening lecture in the Ladies' Literary-Press club course, the New York correspondent of the Chicago Tribune writes the following bit of gossip:

"Sir Edwin Arnold—Sir Edwin is anything but cross. Fancy to yourself a bright, white man, with a curious brown hair, goatish beard, big soft eyes, nervous face, and finger the buttons of his waistcoat—there you have Sir Edwin Arnold."

"The next evening I saw Sir Edwin in his rooms at the Everett house. He sat in a big chair, with his legs drooping over the side-piece in the shape of an upper-case Y. His big nose dominated his face, and he twiddled at his streaked beard. He remarked that his first lecture was on the 'Lullabies of Asia,' and he had a following of 100."

"Ah, Japan," he said slowly—and Sir Edwin is the editor of the London Telegraph and a bachelor—"ah, in Japan one loves well!"

Was not that faint, poetical, full of the hope of a grin dragons and fluttering fans? I thought so, for I remembered the old stories that he used to tell of Sir Edwin as he shipped tea or rode in the jai-pans in the street of the big city of Tokio.

"Do you intend to marry one of the little bronze ladies?" I asked. "No," he made answer, sturdily, "but what is that?"

"What is that?" he said. "It is a tale of brocade and silk, of a young girl who waited for a man who never came, and who then married a man who was not the man she had waited for."

"I do not know, and neither do you, but somehow or other Sir Edwin is a man who is very much interested in the little bronze ladies of the mikado's land."

THE VOLUME OF MONEY.

No advocate of the People's party can arise and assert that the present volume of money is too small without being assailed for his folly by the organs of the plutocracy.

These organs assert that the volume of money is sufficient, and especially do they cry upon the authority of the secretary of the treasury that it is larger now per capita than it ever was before, even larger than it was in the palmy days from 1865 to 1870.

This is not true. No difference has often, nor by whom it is repeated. There is not an intelligent public man or banker but who knows that this is not true and that any figuring by the treasury officials to show the truth is nothing but sham and jugglery.

These mendacious methods to make the volume of money appear larger than it is, show that even the servants of the money power realize that the people know the necessity for a large volume of money in order to put business on a prosperous basis and insure good prices and wages.

The Detroit Tribune attacks President Polk of the Farmers' and Merchants' Association that the amount of our circulating medium in 1885 was $2,000,000,000 with a population of 63,000,000.

It is an admitted fact that the volume of money measures the value of the products of the country. The more money there is, the higher the volume of money is, the larger they are low when the volume of money is small.

The Chicago case of Leon M. Peck and Lillian L. Wigatz against Clara E. Cook to set aside the terms of a will, in which the defendant received a house and lot from the father of the complainant and occupied the time of Judge Grove yesterday and was continued until this morning.

There is no other way for the treasury to get out of its present predicament but to reduce the volume of money by the issue of new treasury notes. A lot of up to $100,000,000 a year in treasury notes is highly appreciated by the tax payers and there would be another good thing about it, the politicians would find it advantageous to ever increase the tax again.

OFFICIAL REPORTS OF THE RAPID GROWTH EVERYWHERE.

The Alliance Bigger and Stronger Than Ever Was Before, and Growing Every Day. Encouraging Facts. Figures. Its Firm Position in the South.

Now, what will the old party men and old party hacks say? Perhaps the best answer to this question is, "They will say nothing for awhile." And it becomes the people of our states to meet during the last ten days and declare with one voice for the Occia demand.

These six are the states of Michigan, Indiana, Kansas, Indiana, Florida and Iowa. To make a total of twenty-six states which have given the people's platform a unanimous endorsement.

When the state of Iowa came solidly into line she reported that 251 new sub-alliances had been organized within the past three months, and that the list was still growing.

The Indiana state Alliance met with 200 delegates present, and reported that 100 sub-alliances had been organized in the state since the last annual meeting.

Florida Alliance met, with every county represented, and endorsed the sub-alliance platform by a vote of 71 to 3. Mr. B. Balkin was elected to succeed President Rogers, who declined reelection.

There has been a gratifying growth in the number of sub-alliances in the state since the last annual meeting. There are more than 20,000 members of the Alliance in Indiana.

California state Alliance enjoyed the greatest enthusiasm and demonstration during the last meeting in that state. Six thousand people were present. The Alliance demands were unanimously adopted by representatives of nearly 50,000 Alliance men.

Many organizations reported an earnest and enthusiastic spread of Alliance principles, and sub-alliances are being organized at the rate of three a day. President Polk was elected to a third year, and the following telegram will give you some idea of the enthusiasm that has been kindled.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 22, 1894. H. W. AYER, Esq., Washington: President Polk's visit to the Pacific coast has aroused us here. His addresses have been limited by the brevity of our largest city. He has spoken every night, and tonight rose to carry on the work by the people's platform and carry back to his home the thanks and blessings of all the Union soldier soldiers and their families.

Mr. H. C. Deanning, secretary of the Pennsylvania state Alliance, writes as follows: HARRISBURG, Pa., Oct. 22, 1894. H. W. Ayer, Esq., Washington: The Alliance is standing today like an oak tree, for a long time to come. It has been very satisfactory during the past year. The number of sub-alliances being considerably over 100. We will increase in membership over 100. We will have a new state Alliance in the near future for the purpose of organizing additional Alliance men.

From this time forward we believe the number of sub-alliances will increase. It has increased on a day throughout the year, possibly we can increase the number of new Alliance over 100. Mr. A. W. Hery, secretary of the Georgia state Alliance, in an official letter, writes as follows: ATLANTA, Oct. 22, 1894. H. W. Ayer, Esq., Washington: I have not grown numerically like the Alliance other. Many are joining us. We are not eligible to membership now. We are a state Alliance in the near future.

My suggestion is to go forward. "On stand!" Mr. A. W. Hery, secretary of the Alabama state Alliance, will show what the order is doing in this state. Mr. H. W. Ayer, Washington: The increase in Alliance growth in Alabama during the past year has been very encouraging. Since our state Alliance organized, Aug. 1, 1893, we have had a large number of new organized primaries. Our fourth quarterly meeting was held in the city of Montgomery throughout the state, and encouraging reports are coming in from all parts.

DEAR SEN.—Georgia has not grown numerically like the Alliance other. Many are joining us. We are not eligible to membership now. We are a state Alliance in the near future. My suggestion is to go forward. "On stand!" Mr. A. W. Hery, secretary of the Alabama state Alliance, will show what the order is doing in this state.
