

THE SISTER'S MARRIAGES

HELED "JOCKEY" BROWN TO ACCU-MULATE A FORTUNE.

Mrs. Hayden's Testimony in the Will Contest
As Corroborated by Her Father's Business
Managers—More Evidence of Her Old Man's Mental Weakness.

The Circuit court resumed work upon the Brown will case yesterday morning with the same large attendance as on the previous day.

In May, 1886, she again made a visit to her parents. At this time her father did not seem to be in the best of health, and she was away at Denver in 1883 visiting her sister Margaret a Christmas present, which was returned without any explanation.

When she returned to Chicago that time her father did not seem to be in the best of health. Her mother and cousin Will went to Chicago with her. Her father did not give her any money to help her pay her traveling expenses.

The following year she returned to Grand Rapids upon the occasion of her mother's death. In 1887 and 1888 she attended her mother's funeral. At this time she remained five or six months at that period.

One time during this visit her father told her that Margaret had told him that she had missed a number of things, and that she thought Alice had taken them. She searched her trunk and room, but found nothing which would tend to corroborate anything which would tend to an entanglement between herself and her father.

He said that the reason she went to the office in the will and Margaret's proceedings, "I know what father wants me to do." In 1880 she heard her father say to her mother that he had two children, and the law would take care of them.

to Denver, clerked in various dry goods stores until he went into business for himself. In business he was successful and now prospered. In Leadville, Alice lived with her husband in the West until she died. Her husband and she were married in 1870 and they remained to contest the will.

Witness did not know what her husband intended to do with his books after her husband until her return. His last time she saw him was at the funeral. He was buried at the state of the account. Before going to Denver Hayden acted as if he were a bookkeeper and she was instructed him to mark off an account against him as paid; the account consisted of a four square acre of land but witness did not know the total.

The old man's account book was produced by Hayden. He was requested to check certain items in it and to explain the same. He seemed to appear in a dazed condition. He was asked to explain the same and he said that he had a piece of land in an account against Hayden of $114 20, in the book which he had crossed off. Alice did not know until the last four years that her father had a piece of land worth $400 net of house was charged against her. The first she saw of it was when she was taken to her.

In the afternoon 250 ladies were in attendance at the funeral. Mrs. Hayden was again cross examined, but the same ground was gone over and the new was drawn out. He told her that he had been in the office for the last ten years of his life; I worked for him collecting rent and looking after his property. I came here at his request, or rather, Mr. Cramer wrote a letter to me and I signed my name to it, requesting my uncle during the last ten years of his life; I worked for him collecting rent and looking after his property.

Margaret and her father talked of Alice; they talked in my presence and alone. I heard Margaret tell her father that she was a flirt; this was in my presence. She said that she was in my dress and was a flirt; this was in my presence. She said that she was in my dress and was a flirt; this was in my presence.

"Margaret frequently alluded to the marriage of Alice in the presence of her father and myself. She told her father that her mother was not very sick but had believed in order to get out of the house."

Alice. I promised Margaret before she went home not to speak to you while she was in the house.

"One day Mr. Brown called Alice to his room and said to her, 'Alice, I have a piece of land worth $400 net of house was charged against her. The first she saw of it was when she was taken to her.'"

"The first three months I lived with her I gave her $8 per month and my uncle told her that she was a flirt; this was in my presence. She said that she was in my dress and was a flirt; this was in my presence."

The Declaration of Principles Carried Off

Will Meet Next at Owosso.

The final session of the Patrons of Industry convened at 7:30 last night with only a handful of members present. Roy Coulter, the chairman of the publication committee, was absent. The labor part of the session, as he had to catch the train for home, and as he carried the news for publication in his inside pocket and did not stop at the newspaper office on the way, it is supposed to be doubtful that they will be in any way.

A resolution of thanks was tendered Mr. and Mrs. Eliza of the Bridge Street House, citizens of Grand Rapids, and the press of the city in particular, she former for their hospitality and the latter for their assistance in the matter of the convention. It was also learned that the convention refused to endorse the platform adopted at St. Louis and that a resolution congratulating the St. Louis convention was tabled much much.

THE SLEEPING DISCONTENT FANNED INTO VIOLENT FLAME.

An Uneasy Night Gives Way to a Day of
Strike—More Rioting by Striking Men.
The Cry of "Work or Bread" May Give Way to "Bread or Blood."

BERLIN, Feb. 26.—The citizens of Berlin have passed one of the most restful nights in the memory of the present generation. The echoes of yesterday's rioting before the ca of the emperor's court not only far into the night, but the embers of the affair were still glowing fiercely this morning.

From sunset until sunrise encounters between the police and the rioters continued at intervals in different parts of the city, mostly, however, in the eastern districts. Heads were broken right and left, and the police captured many more prisoners. Throughout the night the entire police force of the city was retained on duty as well as the detachments of troops were kept under arms.

It is difficult to picture the state of wild excitement and amazement which prevails here and, according to the newspaper reports, in different parts of the city, mostly, however, in the eastern districts. Heads were broken right and left, and the police captured many more prisoners.

THE YOUTHFUL MEN MAKE WAR UPON
THE EXCLUSIVE CHARACTER OF THE CLUB—A Lengthy Debate It Adjourns to Escape Breaking Up in a Row.

The Jefferson club meeting in the Circuit court room last night was attended by two dozen men all told. It was called to order by President Maurice Shanahan.

The committee chosen to secure suitable rooms were unable to make a full report and were given further time.

If any one present had the faintest idea that the organization was other than a Democratic one, he would have become, as Dr. Eggleston says, "disillusioned" before he had been there fifteen minutes.

The gathering, with the exception of J. W. Ransom, felt the same way that Mr. Houseman did, but it should be stated that only the file, with the exception of Maurice Shanahan, Nestor, Hake and Houseman, were present.

F. A. Stace said that dues would make the club exclusive, which above all things should be avoided.

J. W. Ransom was rather warm when he spoke of the membership of the club. He said that the club was not exclusive.

Thomas Nestor said that some people had been talking about the club. He said that the club was not exclusive.

ON THE WHOLE THE OUTLOOK IS SOMEWHAT BETTER.

There is a Very Conservative Feeling Reported All Around—Failures are Not Numerous—More Improvement in Business—The West is Thriving Up.

New York, Feb. 26.—Bradstreet's State of Trade tomorrow will say: There has been some improvement in the number of orders received for spring goods by Western manufacturers.

Emma Rogers' Grip on Kent Street.

The office of the superintendent of police was the scene of much activity yesterday owing to the bringing into that sanctuary of a woman suspected of being a thief. Patrolman Wm. Dugan made the arrest and before the woman was allowed to speak, she was subjected to almost numberless interviews in the private office.

Why they should be so tender of her she also refused to state, and until late last night she refused to give out any information or to say what would be done with her.

Whether she will be prosecuted today remains to be seen. The society man said last night he would not know what the chances for liberty today is considered good unless the authorities make a mistake.

It is true that the Calder street house was by a poor negro, and the man who had the house was a colored man. The society man said last night he would not know what the chances for liberty today is considered good unless the authorities make a mistake.

A MAINE SENSATION.

Portland Man Arrested on Several Charges.

PORTLAND, Me., Feb. 26.—The biggest sensation Portland has experienced for years came this morning with the arrest of H. G. Brooks by United States Marshal Saunders on the charge of conspiracy to ruin a rival business corporation, for a time to break up the Portland and other serious crimes.

Brooks is at the head of the biggest wire-wire concern in the city. He is placed at $50,000 a year. He has a splendid record for the society man's proudest.

There was not much real fighting during the encounter. The rioters were soon convinced that the authorities were completely masters of the situation. A few rioters were captured, it is true, and they were very roughly handled by the police; but to the rioters it was not a defeat.
