NEXT MONDAY.

Our State Election takes place next Monday. Democrats! Are your arrangements all perfect? If not,

Loss no Time. Be prepared in season, and let your arrangements be such as to get out every voter.

Has one saved the election of a Representative, Senator, or a State Ticket. Democratic Nominations.

Are popular men. This always helps your ticket. Be at Home.

Let no Democratic voter be absent on the day of election. Our opponents are always at home to vote.

Watch the Ballot Boxes. See that the ballot boxes are empty before the voting commences. Watch them all day.

Be aware of the tricks. Look out for fraudulent tickets, every one circulated by our opponents, with names altered from the regular Democratic nominations.

Are popular men. This always helps your ticket. Be at Home.

SENATOR WILSON MAKING UP THE CONNECTION.

The Connecticut election is being hotly contested. The Republican prospects have become so desperate that there have been imported at the State Republican office in Kansas and colors—Wilson, Bradley, Giddings & Co.

CHARACTERISTICS OF REPUBLICANISM.

Mr. Eli Thayer, a Republican representative in Congress, from Massachusetts, unlike Messrs. Howard, Waldron, Wallbridge and Leach, of this State, and many of the other Republicans, voted for the admission of Oregon, and said some sharp things to the brethren—Here is one of them:

Some members of the Republican party are always unmercifully severe on their opponents. When they get to heaven they will not be satisfied. Instead of tuning their harps to heavenly strains they will be getting their opera glasses to look over the gulf and see if they can't do us any harm.

The Puritanic instinct—our contemporary, The Democrat, of Louisville—is the chief basis of Thayer's party. They are all uneasy about other people's sins, and feel it their mission to express them. They used to punish heresy by fire and sword, and purge the wretches out of society by hanging. If their zeal lead them to self-sacrificing efforts to reform the world by kindness, persuasion, and pious example, they would be a golly generation better off; but their weakness doesn't allow them to do this. They trust in themselves that they are righteous, and hate others. It is the mission of such sinners as they, to use force to reform sinners. They have become tired of the slow process that heaven has appointed to reform the world. They have substituted their own quicker method, and they seem to be terrified. They have given up with reluctance and regret the cherished practice of making Christians by law; and they are still resolved to use schools to make the rising generation religious, and sectarian at the same time.

The passion of the late is against African slavery. The saints are not the characters involved in the great sin they are uneasy about; but other people are, and to prevent the sins of others they are greatly excited. Their unending vigilance is worthy of all praise, if they were only directed toward a reform of their own sin. But they are safe in their self-righteousness. Why should they rebuke a man for being a slaveholder if there is anything to do at home, and that if they would look at home they would have less to complain of abroad. True to the characteristic of their class, they are

The great Billiard Match. The proposed billiard tournament is the great topic of conversation all over the country, among lovers of the game and sporting men generally. The Detroit correspondent of the Post's Spirit of the Times for the present week, says: "The rooms which Serretier foregoes for practice, are the nightly resort of hundreds of spectators who gather to witness the wonderful exhibitions of playing which he occasionally gives. You do rightly when you occasionally see him as a player, and he deserves it. His skill is not only a source of gratification to his friends, but is an instance of mechanical perfection, accuracy of sight, and delicacy of touch, which must interest the most indifferent person." The same paper, in an editorial on the matter, says:

From the Billiard Table. A life-long Teuton of this city some ten days since was told by his fair Katrina, to whom he was betrothed, that she loved another. He would not believe it, but he was told she had "got for him," and at a drug store purchased five grains of arsenic and committed suicide. He was taken to the hospital, and in a few hours he died. The arsenic did not kill him. The next day he took fifteen grains and wrote another letter to Katrina. But that failed to kill him and the next day he took twenty grains and wrote another letter, and for nine days he has been taking arsenic, increasing his dose five grains a day, till he is actually getting fast on it notwithstanding the counteraction caused by unrefined flour, and he swears he will keep on taking it till she marries him, or let him to take his poison into arsenic, and eat it in slices! There's constancy for you!

Our city is flooded with bogus cent pieces. They readily pass current with those who don't take the trouble to examine them closely. They are well made, and have no mill edge—the stars surrounding the letter C are very indistinctly cut—the bunch of rays next to the letter A are well defined and leaves in the upper bow of the C are wanting in the bogus coin. On the reverse side of the coin the star is very badly executed—the points being set in together, and the bow of the letter A and finally cut, as in the genuine. A lady friend of ours, to whom we showed the two coins, ran out her own piece, and she said the monnaie, and out of eleven three cent pieces two were bogus.

During a thunder storm on Friday last, while the family of a friend of ours, a father who resides near Columbus, Ohio, were eating dinner, the lightning struck a valuable cow in his barn, killing her instantly, and the same flash broke into pieces every plate on the table where the family were eating, and actually melted some of the softer metal upon the table, without in the least injuring any person present.

EDITORIAL MARRIAGE. The editors of Lafayette, Indiana, had a Masquerade Ball the other evening. It was a "stag" ball, no ladies being present. The disguises were simple but impermeable, to wit: The editors were sober and on clean shirts. Their most intimate friends did not recognize them. The Cincinnati and Columbus papers were represented.

ANOTHER BUREAU OF FARE. The Buffalo, New York, and Erie Railroad has again reduced the fare from Buffalo to New York, to $6.50. This shows that active competition has already commenced and is likely to be continued.

NEW BOOKS! NEW BOOKS! Father and Son—by Frederica Bremer. Children and the World—by Mrs. G. A. Wood. A Manual for the Use of County Clerks, Sheriffs, Ac. by John M. Hays. Call and Examine. Which has just been received by H. B. HARRIS'S BOOKSTORE.

THE SEMI-WEEKLY FASHION OPENING.

From the New York Express of Saturday. The Spring campaign of fashion opened yesterday. It was universally acknowledged that the styles are "beautiful, exceedingly," and that they may last longer than all the bonnets—for these are always the most striking feature—are more incised in front, a la Marie Stuart, and have crowns a little larger with narrower capes; the trimming a little less profuse, and therefore in better taste, consists of flowers, thistles, and ribbons. The materials are light and airy; straw and chip are in favor for Spring and country wear; dresses have a compromise of crape and tulle. The exquisite effect of these soft and delicate materials, especially for evening toilette, adapts them to all parties and occasions. The materials used in puffings and edgings, and throat lace in collars, barres, and medallions for ornamenting the outside. Point applique is used for covering evening and carriage hats made of plain silk of light colors.

The pointed waist has fairly superseded the basque for dresses. Then we have the Pompadour, surplice, or Grecian waists; the tight with or without herbas or bretelles; the high and low necked; with sleeve varying according to taste. Double skirts will prevail moderate over flounced skirts, which are not diminished.

Ball dresses, such as were worn at the fair winter season, are still worn, light more antique than rich silks, looped up at the bosom, and with the corsage covered with figures of white tulle. Tulle over silk is much in favor for young ladies, and puffings of tulle are preferred for short sleeves. But very soon mothers and granddaughters will become paramount, and layovers will give way to laques. The little gentry materials for summer are entirely valuable. Doble skirts propose to be almost universal in the future.

A House Devouring a Snake. About two years ago, Mr. William Donnelly, postmaster at the Bienville Residence, West-northern county, received as a present from a friend, two large rattlesnakes, which he preserved in a box covered with glass. After keeping them for some time, it was by natural consequence that the "poison" should have "got for him." Acting upon this idea, and being under the impression that snakes would only eat living food, Mr. Donnelly caught four or five mice, and put them in the cage with their ally companions, to be, as was then supposed, devoured at a single gulp. It did not occur to him that there is anything to do at home, and that if they would look at home they would have less to complain of abroad. True to the characteristic of their class, they are

A STRANGE CHASE AND A STRANGE PUBLICITY. From the Chicago Times, March 27.

In the Chicago harbor, a short distance from the Burlington railroad, there is a strange-looking craft. It is not easy to describe it. In general appearance, it may be likened to a Mississippi flat-boat, but it is a paddle-steamer. It is a large, flat-bottomed vessel, with a single funnel, and a single paddle-wheel. It is a very peculiar-looking craft, and is a very interesting sight. It is a very strange-looking craft, and is a very interesting sight. It is a very strange-looking craft, and is a very interesting sight.

CONTRADICTORY ACCOUNTS FROM THE KANSAS CITY JOURNAL.

The Kansas City Journal of Commerce, of March 15, publishes a letter from Edward Brookfield, late Mayor of Nebraska City, dated St. Louis, Mo., February 28, in which the writer, whose particulars for observation have been ample, says that he has seen the body of the miner, and that it was a dead man.
