Title:	Dorothy Leonard Judd papers
ID:	Collection 104
Date [inclusive]:	1884-1985, n.d.
Physical Description:	17.125 Linear Feet Over 25 boxes
Language of the Material:	English
Abstract:	Dorothy Leonard Judd (1898-1989) was an activist in Grand Rapids, Michigan. Her papers document her personal and professional life. Important in the collection are records documenting Judd's involvement in the drafting of a new Michigan State Constitution at the Constitutional Convention (Con-Con). Also important is the League of Women Voters series, 1926-1976. Judd was an active member in the Grand Rapids League, served as Michigan State president in 1928, and headed the National League's Efficiency in Government Committee from 1932-1934. Included in the League series are several scrapbooks documenting its history. Also included is a family history series that contains genealogy material and an autobiography of Leonard Judd. Other series included in the collection are Civil Service, City Government, Education, Photographs, Publications, Pamphlets, Scrapbooks, and Miscellaneous.

Biographical / Historical

Dorothy Leonard Judd (September 14, 1898 - February 14, 1989) was born in Grand Rapids, Michigan, the daughter of Willie Stansbury Leonard and Harry Carr Leonard, of the Leonard Refrigerator Company family. Mrs. Judd attended Fountain Street School and later Central High School from which she graduated in 1915. During her high school years she met her future husband Siegel Wright Judd. After graduation from high school, she attended Grand Rapids Junior College for one year. She went to Vassar College fall 1916, graduated 1920. She married Siegel Judd on June 29, 1922. Siegel Judd was one of the principles forming the firm of Warner, Norcross & Judd in 1931. They had two children, Harriette and Dorothy.

Mrs. Judd's career in public service began with her involvement in the League of Women Voters in 1921. She served as state president in 1928, and headed the national league's Efficiency in Government Committee from 1932-34. She was also concerned with cleaning up local government within her own city in the 1950s. The highlight of her career was in 1961 when she was selected as a delegate to the Constitutional Convention for the State of Michigan. Mrs. Judd was also active in the development of Civil Service. During the 1960s she was concerned with higher education and Grand Rapids Junior College.

For more biographical information refer to the Portrait and Biographical file located in the Michigan Room and her Autobiography included with the collection.
