Physical Description:	89.4 Linear Feet
Language of the Material:	English .
Abstract:	The GRPL Art & Graphics Collection was first created in 1998 to document holdings in the Grand Rapids Public Library that are valued first for the artistic, graphic and illustrative content. New information is routinely added to this finding aid as new items or information are received or as additional research materials are obtained. This collection brings together various art works which are not otherwise part of another GRPL archival collection. For information on art in other GRPL archival collections, see the list of related collections later in this document. This collection focuses primarily on Grand Rapids area artists, with occasional information on Michigan art & artists. The collection also includes some art holdings by national or international artists. For example the World War I posters and prints, created for the most part by French artists of that period, are out of scope as direct local history objects, but part of the special collections mission of the department, and represent an international event in which Grand Rapids soldiers and medical personnel participated. A growing portion of Collection 224 is ancillary reference and biographical materials on local art and artists, and art organizations, Also sometimes included is information on those national or international artists with art work in the collection. For example, information on sculptor Alexander Calder, creator of Grand Rapids La Grande Vitesse monumental stabile, can be found in this collection, along with documentation of select holdings by Calder on paper. Calder information and holdings are also located in other GRPL archival collections. Reference documents in the collection include biographical files, exhibit catalogs, flyers and mailing cards, newspaper and magazine articles and clippings, books or other printed matter. These files often contain reproductions of an artist's work, in lieu of

the actual art. The media used in the actual art represented in this collection are paintings, original sketches, original prints, and various published graphics, including numerous posters. Several of the art and graphic objects which are part of other GRPL collections are physically housed with Coll. 224 materials, for the management of these similar sizes and types of materials. Some boxes listed in the 224 box summary, for example, reference oversized graphics such as the architectural drawings which are formally part of Coll. 254, the GRPL Buildings Collection. A list of Hanging Art is gradually being compiled, which will assist patrons in locating examples on display within the building, but may not be complete for all objects at this time. Items not on regular display are available to view, following regular routines for accessing archival materials within the department, or by using reference sources in publications or on the Internet.

Biographical / Historical

The history of original art and graphics in Grand Rapids is believed to have begun with a drawing depicting the area, now called "Grand Rapids in 1831." This illustration shows the Native American village on the West Side of the Grand River, and is said to have been made by the Rev. John Booth. Two versions of this historical sketch exist in this collection, both of which are said to be original to Booth, and a third original item was listed for sale from a rare book dealer within recent years. Presuming all are by Booth, he seems to have created several copies, basically of the same view, which may have been commemorative, or as a gift to a visitor, or perhaps simply a graphic description of his surroundings that he sent to friends or family. As with many of the early illustrations which depict Grand Rapids, Booth's illustration has been reproduced in the various history books on Grand Rapids, and may already be familiar to many collection users.

Another early illustration in this collection is "Grand Rapids in 1856" by Sarah Nelson Ballard. Sarah Nelson was one of several local youths who took art instruction from one of the first, and best known, artists of Grand Rapids, Marinus Harting. Born July 1815 at Delft, Holland, Harting emigrated to the U.S. in the summer of 1849. He came to Grand Rapids in July 1854, where he is documented as having taught such later notables as Lawrence Earle and Frederick Stuart Church. He died March 9, 1861. No art by Harting is known, but a faded photo of him is included in this collection.

These artists probably considered themselves non-professionals, but have provided a valuable service by providing us with a glimpse of what the area was like before the camera came into use in Grand Rapids. These artists include Miss Cuming, Cadette Fitch, Rebecca Richmond and Thomas Porter.

Other artists who studied with Harting went on to become nationally or internationally known. One of these was Frederick Stuart Church, who had a studio in New York City's Carnegie Hall for most of his lifetime. Original and reproduction items by F.S. Church, given to the Library from the Estate of Church's friend and famous national art patron, Charles Freer, are documented in a separate archival collection, Coll. 228. Church's work includes rare documents and identifiable places or persons, but often served as popular illustrations for use in national periodicals, for example.

Other artists came to Grand Rapids independently. A few works by one of Grand Rapids best known artists, Mathias Alten, are included in this collection. Alten's work sometimes documents Grand Rapids scenes.

Another early graphic form documented in Coll. 224 is the early broadside, which evolved into the poster. The early items are without illustration and advertise events, items for sale, or are public communications.

Advertising trade cards or other smaller advertising display forms first used generic illustrations. These were purchased through national printing houses, predating most known local trade illustrations. Then local printers began using generic dies until the development of other means of graphic reproduction, which led to the numerous color posters included in this collection today. Most examples of the smaller forms of early advertising are found in other GRPL Archives collections, such as Colls. 216 or 302, with additional information on early printing in Colls. 289 or 296.

One of the best known posters, by a nationally known American graphic artist associated with Grand Rapids, is the World War I poster by Gerrit Beneker: "Sure, We'll Finish the Job." No version of this poster is currently part of the GRPL holdings; however, this image is widely available in book publications and online.

A large number of original World War I graphics, either prints or posters, and mostly by French artists, are included in Coll. 224. It is believed these works were acquired by former GRPL Director Samuel Ranck, who worked for nearly a year in Europe during the war as a representative of the American Library Association. Mr. Ranck provided library services to the American troops in Europe. During this time he was also able to pursue collection development for the Grand Rapids Public Library.

Posters, communicating a number of area events, are the largest form of art included in Coll. 224. The annual Grand Rapids Festival posters are included in this collection (see also additional information and graphics related to the Festival in Coll. 237). Select examples of the "picnic" posters, created by Herman Miller artist Steven Frykolm for the company's annual corporate picnic, are examples of local artists gaining national note. These posters are part of Coll. 233, documenting the area furniture industry. (Frykholm's Vandenberg poster rests on an easel in archives, facing the VanderVeen Center.)

Other items in this or other GRPL Archival collections are examples of engraving, often used in publications, or sometimes issued as prints or pictorial maps.

A review of the Grand Rapids city directories shows local engravers working here during the later part of the 19th century and into the 20th. Some of these artists/engravers were women. Their work is often unsigned where it is used, but that work may be seen in the city directories themselves, or in other printed works, where it was often used for the purpose of advertising.

Some Grand Rapids artists in this collection are known for their book illustrations, including names such as Thomas Mitchell Peirce or Kate Torrey. Other art in this collection represent national book illustration artists, such as Lois Lenski, whose works are collected by the Library.

See also the separate archival collections for Kreigh Collins and Paul Collins, who both created original hanging art for sale, as well as illustrations for book publications and other types of graphics.

A local stable of artists including, for a while, Kreigh Collins, formed around Ray Barnes at the Grand Rapids Herald. They did illustrative work for the newspaper, as well as original graphic art of the annual "Newsboys" greetings. Both Gerrit Beneker and Mathias Alten are represented in the Newsboys graphic designs, which are documented in Colls. 289 and 297. Coll. 224 contains primarily published examples or reference information on the artists in this group, with signed published work by "Korff" or "Gert" (Gertrude Van Houten) or, early on, by Lumen Winter.

After the new Grand Rapids Public Library building opened in 1904 and before a separate art museum was created, the Library was one of the city's common art exhibit venues. What little documentation exists today can be found mostly in the Bulletin of the GRPL in Coll. 109. A few random exhibit lists of early exhibits are included here; others might occur in scrapbooks in the various archival collections.

Scope and Contents

The Grand Rapids Public Library Art & Graphics Collection documents and summarizes the library's two-dimensional original art, posters, plates taken from books and other types of graphics created primarily for visual communication purposes. Some later reproductions are also included. Other types of graphic materials, such as photographs or postcards, are located in their own separate collections. A few photographic series are included here, wherein these were created primarily for art and graphics purposes.

Architectural drawings, which were previously part of this collection, are now primarily described in Coll. 254, the GR Buildings Collection. However, there are some works representing buildings in this collection, and cross referenced in Coll. 254, when: -the items are primarily created as art, -when the items are more Michigan than Grand Rapids, -or when there is graphic work associated with a structure but not particularly illustrating a structure

Image items, in any physical form, are also held in other named collections within the Archives. These items are not formally part of this generic graphic collection, but may be shelved physically with Coll. 224 graphics, and cross-referenced here, for advice to the user. Some additional art is owned and displayed by the Library, but not managed as part of Archival holdings. The Archives is just beginning to collect here biographical materials on Grand Rapids associated artists, which may also include published illustrations of their work.

Supplemental reference items are now also being added to this collection, such as artists' biographies or exhibit catalogs and fliers, which also illustrate and explain graphic works and/or graphic design.

A supplemental database, in development, attempts to index all holdings which are primarily 2-D art.

Included here are items that provide information through an illustrative or display medium, or that are original works of art, including portraiture, scenic or theme art, etc. The content of many of the items is also suited to other collections, by the topic or the type of materials.

In several cases, items will actually be housed with Coll. 224, but also listed in other finding aids, as appropriate. These items usually have folder labeled "224/109," for example, or "224/245." The second number is the official home collection, for the graphic item which is shelved with Coll. 224 graphics materials.

Certificates, calendars and other types of materials that may have a graphic nature or contain graphics as part of their content will not necessarily be included here, but might more often be found in the GRPL Ephemera Collection 216, or in other named archival collections.

Human information systems deliver data with words and images. The Grand Rapids History & Special Collections Center collects both, often used together. While the book collections and archival manuscripts typify information delivery primarily in written form, several collections are notable first for the visual information they contain. At the far side of this dichotomy is the GRPL Art & Graphics Collection, along with those segments of other collections, which contain original or copies of artists' creations. These holdings are not an attempt to compete with the Grand Rapids Art Museum, for example, but usually pick up where they leave off, collecting more of the common graphics presented in day-to-day life.

Related Materials

Related Materials

Some other collections contain significant materials of a graphic nature. These include:

001: Nancy Mulnix Collection, documenting the process of bringing La Grand Vitesse, the Alexander Calder stabile, to Grand Rapids.

040: Cadette Everett Fitch Collection, including her original art.

042: Thomas W. Porter Archaeological & Grand Rapids Graphics Collection, including Porter's sketches of early Grand Rapids archaeological sites and found objects, as well as some Grand Rapids buildings.

056: The Kreigh Collins Collection, documenting this Grand Rapids and Michigan artist's work, including original and published versions of his illustrations and cartoons.

094: Richmond Family Papers, including original art by Rebecca Richmond, and sketches by Frederick Stuart Church on some of his letters to her.

109: Grand Rapids Public Library Administrative Archives. The archives of the Library itself is the original home of such illustrative work as the original rendering of the Ryerson Library Building, or other illustrative works created for or of the Library or Library activities. Some of these items are references in the Master Hanging Art List. (See Coll. 109 for others.) Art associated with books, such as the Lois Lenski drawings, have been made primarily part of Coll. 224, not 109, since they do not document the works of the Grand Rapids Public Library in particular.

123: Caroline P. Campbell Papers, including sketches by Frederick Stuart Church on some of his letters to her.

222: William A. Seeley Grand Rapids and Michigan Graphics Collection, including his art documenting area buildings, as well as his collection of others' architectural works.

228: The Charles L. Freer Collection of Art Work by Frederick Stuart Church, including original oils, etchings, prints and reproductions, given by his famous collector/patron. The two most important works from this collection are listed in the finding aid in the Master List of Hanging Art.

233: Grand Rapids Public Library Furniture Industry Collection, including the oversized Thorne room illustrations, several of which were used to illustrate articles in local furniture magazines. (These items are housed in the Flat Files.)

236: Grand Rapids Festival Collection. A unique poster is created each year for the Festival. Many of these have been included in Coll. 224, as they have been received from various and unknown donors. While the Festival posters were not received with the Festival Collection itself, there is an Exhibit series from a 1994 exhibit "Celebrating 25 Years of Festival."

245: Past Perfect, Inc. Historic Preservation Collection, including architectural drawing sets for building renovation projects wherein Past Perfect staff consulted.

253: Corporate Color Graphics, including a small collection including examples of photographic work used for calendar illustrations.

254: Grand Rapids Buildings Collection, including more documentation than art, this collection serves as the general holdings location for architectural drawings and other publications about area buildings and architects. Miscellaneous published graphics clippings or illustrative works are also included.

269: Paul Collins Biographical & Exhibit Catalogs Collection documenting this Grand Rapids artist's work through his national exhibits publications. One of his original works is included in the art managed by Library Administration.

289: Greater Grand Rapids Area Publishers & Publishing Collection, including published works by area Grand Rapids illustrators. Includes some Newsboys calendar graphics of area scenes and by area illustrators.

296: Arthur Ormsbee Graphic & Printing Industry Collection documenting the area's printing industry, including some examples of area illustrators and the area graphic arts process.

297: Grand Rapids Press Collection, including some Newsboy calendar graphics by area illustrators.

302: Fanny Phillips Young Advertising Trade Card Collection including examples of primarily 19th-century trade cards used by, and occasionally created by, Grand Rapids firms.

357: Orville Bulman Art Reference Collection including published examples of Bulman's work, including exhibit catalogs and a recent publication.

Description

Description

2 photo portraits, 1 in center and one of boy in bottom right corner. 12 caricature drawings, full body, of the players, with names as follows:1929. C.A. Renwick "It's Slow"

1930. John Steketee "It's a hog"

1931. Skip McNabs last shot "I'm too wide"

1932. Jas. Bayne "Whats the score"

1933. Skip Thompson "You have trun me"

1934. Dave Forbes "Allright Dr" (all right)

1935. Will White "Come on Charley"

1936. Will Jarvis He is a pretty shooter

1937. Darby Hull (Peaceful Valley)

1938. Bert Belnap "Whoop 'er up"

1939. C.E. Miller "On-the-second-ring" (Behind the tee)

1940. Skip Robertson "Now take the ice this time, your rotten"

Message bottom center: On February 15, 1906, the Grand Rapids Curling club made its first appearance in Toronto in the finals for Ontario tankard. The players were Miller, Thompson, Steketee, Hull, Forbes, Robertson (Skip), Bayne, McNabb (Skip). The blocks of our players were warm, accounting for their defeat in the first game, against the strongest club in the competition, Toronto Granites, by a score of 34 to 33. In commemoration of the trip, that genial host, James Bayne, entertained at his well-appointed home. These characteristic sketches done by Alex Bayne were place cards at the perfect dinner served on that occasion. The participants will ever remember the event; to record it for the club, through the magnanimity [sic, magnanimity] of "Pretty Shooter" Jarvis, and "Puff up a little" Thompson, the sketches are here preserved. [No ID for boy bottom right, the man in the photo is perhaps Bayne.]

There are two versions of this sketch which are said to be Booth originals, purchased from a dealer ca. 1980. One variant is in box 10, unframed and encapsulated, and the other is in box 10.5, with the frame which previously housed it. There is a framed later reproduction, sold through the Grand Rapids Historical Society, housed with box 10.5. Reproductions are also available through the Department, using copy negative #3853.

One or the other representations of this image have been reproduced in various books over the years, including:

Box 10.5

General

Lots of pencil notes hidden by frame at bottom front on image. Begins: Mr.? Isaac Peck? & ...

[Deframed 1/24/2005 for ID information. Written across the bottom side and continuing up the right side, in pencil: Mrs.(?) Isaac Peck of ?, formerly Miss ?attie Knapp of this City, whose Uncle, Rev. J. Booth, sketched this picture, now in possession of Mrs. Ph? D. Gilbert. Verso: Be careful of this picture, as soon as through with it, return to Mrs. T.D. Gilbert, 55 N. Lafayette Street.]

"Martin" written on the corrugated cardboard first seen when the cover paper attached to the back of the frame was removed. Two white boards next at the back are acidic, and discolored as it stepped on. What looks like an old archival folder was next against the item, but it is acidic now, as well. [Original shows discoloration & some tearing. The back shows ridges as if corregated itself, but this may be from an earlier framing, when it may have been directly against corrugated cardboard.] One of two versions. 00. [0464].2

Student(?) drawing for a work bench by Arthur E. Patterson, Dec. 7, 1915. 00.[2509].1	Box 30

Student Drawings 1881. MKG Transfer. First, Second and Third/Fourth Grammar Drawings.

Scope and Contents

In 3 volumes. Mostly Design type drawings, fractures, etc. in pencil, probably traced, but no explanation given. Each sheet gives a sample of the students work, usually 4 items, and includes the student's name, age, usually the teachers name, and sometimes the school. The Third/Fourth Grammar has a few interior perspective studies and drawings of objects, plus the first item, an exterior sketch of Central High School" by Grove Antrim(?). Compare with Owen Jones "Grammar of Ornament," which was first published in 1856, and may have influence this project. Was this type of study typical of schools throughout the country, or unique to Grand Rapids?
